

When it Comes to Compliance, One Wrong Turn Can Be Disastrous

The road to compliance is long, winding and perilous. A wrong turn -- or oversight -- can result in penalties, law suits or a major breach of your intellectual property. Do you have the dedicated resources to monitor and make sure you avoid these top ten compliance mistakes?

- Failing to Update Employee Manuals and Handbooks to Comply with New Laws / Regulations
- Re-using old severance agreements
- The "1099 Employee."
- The overly generous employee evaluation
- Failure to document performance and conduct issues
- The Email Trail – smoking guns
- Failure to protect confidential information – think through use of confidentiality agreements and non-competes; treat confidential and trade secret information confidentially
- Misclassifying employees as "exempt" – salaried does not mean exempt.
- Failure to properly train supervisors and management in the handling of complaints of discriminatory conduct or harassment (including a failure to properly investigate)
- Failure to follow policy/ Inconsistent procedures.

Our agency offers technology that -- provides easy access to the information and resources needed to prevent these mistakes.
